

Building an effective supportive and collaborative relationship to support offering CBT self-help

What actions can a health care practitioner do to build an effective collaborative relationship?

How can we make sure that the questions we ask build an effective collaborative relationship?

One key area I could change myself: